ON THE COVER

SEA CHANGE: The Gulf of Maine, A NOVA Special Presentation reveals how the lessons learned from this body of water may have global implications

I worked on together for National Geographic a number of years ago. The throughline between the projects is Brian’s work—spectacular underwater photography that clearly (and beautifully) shows what is happening in the Gulf and why it matters. You can watch this film on television on GBH 2 on July 24 and 31 at 10pm or stream it on GBH Passport and on the free PBS app (see page 12). And there are more ways you can take GBH along with you.

- For road trips, listen to GBH News’ fascinating “The Big Dig” podcast wherever you get your podcasts (gbhnews.org/podcasts, Apple, Spotify, Amazon Music)—about America’s most famous infrastructure project—or take in the sounds of Tanglewood every Sunday night by streaming classical.org
- From anywhere in the world with an internet connection, binge the latest MASTERPIECE mysteries on the PBS app or Passport or dive into WORLD documentaries on YouTube or worldchannel.org
- For those barbecues and picnics, make some of Lidia Bastianich’s award-winning recipes by streaming episodes of Lidia’s Kitchen on gbh.org/tv-shows
- And if you are staying local, join us at our booth at the Open Streets events in Jamaica Plain (July 21) and Hyde Park (August 11). Or stop by our GBH Boston Public Library Studio, where you can catch live radio broadcasts of Boston Public Radio from 11am to 2pm on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Fridays, or The Culture Show on Fridays from 2pm–3pm.

Have a wonderful summer!

ADVERTISEMET
The making of the three-part series SEA CHANGE: The Gulf of Maine, A NOVA Special Presentation is a story of serendipity. It involved a chance encounter and required the cooperation of the weather, the seas, and living creatures.

In 2018, John Bredar, GBH’s vice president of national programming, was standing in line at a food truck in GBH’s parking lot when he recognized a former National Geographic colleague, photojournalist and documentary film producer Brian Skerry, standing nearby. Skerry was onsite for a radio interview, and he mentioned that he was working on a story about the Gulf of Maine. Bredar had recently moved to Maine and was contemplating a similar idea. These two coincidences led to this new NOVA special presentation, directed by filmmakers Chun-Wei Yi and Stella Cha and produced by Skerry with Bredar and GBH’s Laurie Donnelly as co-executive producers.

The Gulf of Maine is a unique body of water stretching from Cape Cod to Nova Scotia. Its combination of sand, mud, and gravel floors; rocky and sandy coastlines; mixing warm and cold currents; and a temperate climate—result in one of the world’s richest marine ecosystems. Worryingly, however, the Gulf is warming faster than 99% of the world’s oceans. Its codfish population is at just 1% of its colonial levels. “I remember going to Eastport, Maine, back in the ’80s and ’90s, and it used to be like going into an aquarium,” says Skerry. “It’s now a ghost town.” SEA CHANGE explores the reasons behind these changes, how they impact the people who depend on these waters, and what can be done to reverse the damage.

The team spent time with Indigenous clam farmers, whose people have lived on these shores for 14,000 years; scallop divers; lobster fishers; seaweed entrepreneurs; scientists; and other people learning to adapt their livelihoods and approaches to the changing environment. “[The Gulf of Maine] is like a canary in a coal mine,” says GBH’s Executive Producer of Lifestyle Programming Laurie Donnelly. “The changing waters are dramatically impacting how people make a living. But entrepreneurs, fishermen, Indigenous scholars, and scientists—the collective of everybody rowing in the same direction, all bringing a different expertise—gives me hope.”

The filmmakers confronted spectacular challenges, many directly related to climate change. Frequent rain events delayed filming and compromised underwater visibility. Extreme winds and bitter cold added danger. A trip to Cashes Ledge, an underwater mountain range 80 miles off Maine’s coast, required divers to hold ropes as they descended so that the tides and currents didn’t pull them out to sea. And yet, the team was able to take viewers deep underwater to the largest kelp forest on the East Coast, a place that holds hope as a haven for struggling fish populations. They filmed green crabs, an invasive predator of clams, and then learned how scientists and clammers are innovating to protect the clams and their industry. They captured footage of terns trying unsuccessfully to feed their babies a species of fish that has proliferated in warming waters.

“This is right outside our doors, part of our daily breath, part of our history,” says Bredar. “The bounty built the colony, the Commonwealth, and arguably the nation...While the health of the Gulf is most immediately a local story, it has truly global implications. What happens here is likely going to happen worldwide.”

“Lethal Dissent”: A New Podcast from The World

For Iranian dissidents, the consequences of speaking out can be deadly. “Lethal Dissent,” a new nine-part podcast from The World, GBH and PRX’s global news radio program, investigates the price and peril that Iranian dissidents face for speaking against their government and follows the secret operatives who seek to silence them. It begins when two friends flee Iran to escape the regime’s crackdown on dissent. But when they arrive in Turkey, one of them dies under unusual circumstances. Fariba Nawa, a reporter in Istanbul, works to unravel the mystery of what happened, entering Turkey’s underworld of kidnappers-for-hire and shady government officials and taking listeners inside an Iranian operation to snatch exiles who stand up to the regime. The stakes? The right to say what you believe, and potentially, your life.

“The World has a decades-long legacy of nuanced reporting on global stories with on-the-ground journalists,” said The World Editor-in-Chief Dan Lothian. “We’re proud to continue our commitment to international storytelling with this edge-of-your-seat podcast reported by the talented Fariba Nawa and with support from the Pulitzer Center and Zamaneh Media, and in collaboration with Istanbul’s “On Spec” podcast.”

“Lethal Dissent” is now available on all major podcast platforms.

Meet Marco Werman

Marco Werman, co-host of The World, public radio’s longest-running daily global news program, has worked in journalism since he was a 16-year-old copy boy at the News and Observer in Raleigh, North Carolina. He has worked all over the world, joining GBH in 1995 to start The World, which is now heard on more than 300 stations across North America.

Turbine Testing Continues in Canal

A new license from the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission will make the Bourne Tidal Test Site at the Cape Cod Canal the only tidal test site in the country that allows marine turbines to generate renewable electricity that can be sent to the power grid. With this eight-year pilot license, the nonprofit Marine Renewable Energy Collaborative will own and maintain the facility and private developers will bring their turbines for testing in real ocean water.

Testing in ocean waters allows for turbines that are larger in diameter than those tested on land but with little risk to marine life. “The blades on these things, because they are in water, move relatively slowly compared to wind turbines... Despite millions of dollars of testing worldwide, there has been no impact on fish or marine mammals,” the Collaborative’s Executive Director John Miller told CAI’s John Basile.

“We could generate about the equivalent of a nuclear power plant in Massachusetts waters. Wave energy is also something we are helping people test...And worldwide these have tremendous potential because wave and tidal energy tend to be more consistent and predictable.”

The Collaborative is seeking state funding to connect the test site to the power grid.

Here is a selection of some of our favorite new titles coming in August. Watch these and more.

MASTERPIECE/Wolf Hall
This award–winning historical drama, adapted from Hilary Mantel’s bestselling novel, has been a favorite since it first aired in 2016, and it is coming to Passport. Power broker Thomas Cromwell (Mark Rylance) deals with deadly political intrigue, the tempestuous relationship of King Henry VIII (Damian Lewis) and Anne Boleyn (Claire Foy), and the upheavals of the Protestant reformation.

Hijos del Desierto (Sons of the Desert)
Pedro and Gaspar’s parents are massacred by the Chilean government in 1907 during a protest about working conditions in the salt mines. One of the brothers is kidnapped, and when they meet again 30 years later as enemies on opposite sides of the law, they do not know they are family.

PBS NewsHour/Democratic National Convention
PBS NewsHour travels to Chicago for four nights of primetime coverage of the Democratic National Convention as the party formally renominates Joe Biden and Kamala Harris for President and Vice President of the United States in advance of the November election.

A Boston (R)Evolution
In 2021, Boston was in the midst of a competitive mayoral election campaign with a candidate field that was more gender and racially diverse than any in history. This documentary examines a political race that reflected and highlighted the city’s changing demographics and sense of self.

What’s Cooking on GBH?

Aragosta Lobster Pasta | 4 to 6 servings

Creamy pasta; delicate lobster; and a bright gremolata of fresh parsley, garlic, and lemon zest shine in this lobster pasta dish from Aragosta at Goose Cove, the storied farm-to-coast-to-table restaurant and inn in Deer Isle, Maine. Yankee Senior Food Editor Amy Traverso and her team had just a moment to admire the sweeping view of East Penobscot Bay before chef-owner Devin Finigan stepped out of the kitchen, prepped and ready to cook. The lobster meat is a splurge, but it’s absolutely worth it. Watch it all come together on Weekends with Yankee on Sun (7/7) at 11:30am on GBH 2.

TO PREPARE

STEP 1 In a small bowl, stir gremolata ingredients. Set aside.

STEP 2 In a large bowl, use a spatula to fold the lobster meat with the mascarpone, lemon juice and zest, garlic, and parsley. Add salt to taste and set aside.

STEP 3 Set a large pot of salted water over high heat and bring to a boil. Add pasta and cook according to package instructions until still just a bit firm in the center. Drain, reserving a cup of pasta water.

STEP 4 Meanwhile, in a large skillet over medium-high heat, add the wine and shallot and bring to a simmer. Simmer until the wine reduces to about 2 tablespoons. Add the butter, a few cubes at a time, to the wine mixture, whisking as you go. It should blend and look creamy. Add the cream and stir until the sauce can coat the back of a spoon.

STEP 5 Add the cooked pasta to the pan and stir to combine. Add a ladeful of pasta water to thin the sauce if desired. Salt to taste. Serve hot, topped with gremolata.

INGREDIENTS

Gremolata
• 1 tablespoon minced garlic
• 1 tablespoon minced fresh parsley
• 1 tablespoon freshly grated lemon zest

Pasta and Sauce
• 1 pound cooked lobster, cut into bite-size pieces
• 1/2 cup mascarpone cheese
• 1 tablespoon lemon juice
• Freshly grated zest of 1 lemon
• 1 small garlic clove, minced
• 1/4 cup chopped fresh parsley
• Kosher salt to taste, plus more for pasta water
• 12 ounces dried linguine or tube-shaped pasta
• 1/2 cup dry white wine, such as pinot grigio
• 1 small shallot, minced
• 2 tablespoons unsalted butter, cut into small cubes
• 2 tablespoons heavy cream

Jeffrey Rosen with The Pursuit of Happiness
Mon (7/8) at 6pm ET (Virtual)
GBH’s Forum Network, American Ancestors, and the Boston Public Library present a conversation with Jeffrey Rosen on his book, The Pursuit of Happiness: How Classical Writers on Virtue Inspired the Lives of the Founders and Defined America. Learn about what Rosen discovered when researching six of the most influential founders, including Franklin, Washington, and Jefferson, to learn what pursuing happiness meant in their lives. Register here.

➤ Build Your Summer Reading List with Beyond the Page
GBH has hosted some of today’s most popular writers, including Elin Hilderbrand, Kristin Hannah, and Dean Koontz, to talk about their latest works and their writing process. You can stream many past events on the GBH website and on YouTube. Learn more.

➤ Open Streets Boston
Sun (7/21) at 10:30am ET in Jamaica Plain
Sun (8/11) at 10:30am ET in Hyde Park
GBH is proud to be the exclusive media sponsor of Open Streets Boston, when streets in different communities become car-free for a day, and people can come together for fresh air, live art, music, and community-building. Learn more.
